

Health and Safety Policy

It is the policy of Red7Marine to ensure that all work is planned safely to ensure that our employees and any other persons that may be affected by our activities are not harmed when conducting work activities associated with our operations.

All of our operations shall be conducted in accordance with, or exceed the requirements of, all pertinent legislation and relevant industry guidance and good practice.

The existence of the Health & Safety Management System is the direct responsibility of the Managing Director who has appointed a Quality Manager to implement and maintain the system in accordance with the requirements of OHSAS 18001.

We are committed to the prevention of injury and ill health and target zero philosophy in the workplace. We have implemented a comprehensive risk management process to ensure the activities we conduct are encompassed within the principles of ALARP.

We are committed to continuously improving our Health & Safety management and performance and look to achieve this by constant monitoring and reviewing, the setting of objectives and achieving strategic targets.

We shall constantly look to develop a strong safety culture and recognise that the maximum level we can expect from our employees is the minimum level demonstrated by management.

We shall develop a high degree of Health & Safety awareness and competence amongst our employees through management communications and training programmes.

We pride ourselves on our Health & Safety standards and expect the same standards from others with whom we contract and interact.
